Dear Flatirons' Families:

Happy Holidays!

Two more days until Winter break and the building will be pretty quiet until January 4th. The excitement in the building is growing. We have a lot to get excited about! A few weeks ago we had a great front-page article in the Daily Camera featuring our iLab and the great work going on in our new space. We just completed another video that was emailed out today to families and also put on our website that features some current projects in the iLab. We completed two successful Open Enrollment tours that featured our parents leading tours with prospective families for the upcoming school year.

The fifth grade band and orchestra started out our holiday celebrations with a concert this week. Then, our 1st and 2nd grade learning communities had their annual Winter Festival and Fair yesterday. It included great food served by the parents, dancing and a display on iPads of the culminating project for their economics unit: commercials filmed in the iLab featuring products they had made. Finally, tomorrow the rest of our classes will celebrate our accomplishments and the season and the building will be filled with family and friends.

During this holiday season I am thankful for the opportunity to work at Flatirons with the best students, staff and parents in the district. I am looking forward to great things in the coming new year. I hope that everyone gets the opportunity to slow down a little and spend time with family and friends over the next two weeks.

Sincerely,
